

Abstract of the Disclosure

Data files in a storage device are ranked in the ascending order of importance. When the storage capacity of the storage device is insufficient for the addition of a new file, the files are deleted automatically in the order of importance beginning with the least important file. Thus, a storage space for the new file is reserved.

5

10

15